

Homeschooling in the News

Stanford Magazine

In a Class By Themselves

"A wave of homeschoolers has reached the Farm--students with unconventional training and few formal credentials. What have they got that Stanford wants? And how do admission officers spot it?" A revealing look into one university's perspective of homeschoolers.

December 28, 2000

Milwaukee Journal -Sentinel

Schools losing Students to home

Homeschooling numbers continue to rise as public school enrollments drop in Waukesha County, Wisconsin School District. The change is attributed to parental dissatisfaction with schools and other factors, including school officials' suspicion that some parents of failing and truant students are circumventing compulsory attendance statutes.

December 24, 2000

Dallas Morning News

Homeschooling coverage in three related articles:

Home is where the class is

A day in the life of home-school families

Home-schooled kids report finding plenty of social opportunities

December 21, 2000

CNS News

Daytime curfew law upheld

After numerous truancy violations, a homeschooling family in Monrovia, CA, represented by HSLDA, loses its challenge of a daytime curfew law.

November 30, 2000

Albuquerque Journal

Taking the Home-Schooling Leap

A public school official notes the diversity among homeschooling families, and homeschoolers themselves dispel some common myths in this positive article about homeschooling in New Mexico.

December 7, 2000

Columbus Dispatch

Alternative forms of schooling can be good fit, forum told

Homeschooling parents Belinda Augustus and Bruce Purdy participated in a Columbus, Ohio group's panel discussion of alternative education.

November 11, 2000

USA Today

Homeschooled applicants raise entrance issues

Breaking through the red tape in college admissions.