The hottest trend for trees: sweaters!

While most of the world is trying to stop environmental warming, Corrine Bayraktaroglu and the artistic town of Yellow Springs, Ohio, are doing their best to contribute to it by keeping a tree toasty. The Knit Knot Tree, pioneered by Corrine, is a pear tree with a cozy, colorful sweater. The first panel — a gold piece with the words “Knit Knot Tree” and a smiley face — went up in October, and by February, people were contributing their own work. “Then it just took off like crazy,” Corrine says.

FISH STORY

Art you can eat!

Don't forget the wasabi! On March 6 in Tokyo, Japanese master sushi chef Ken Kawasumi proudly displayed his latest creations: A recreation of Vincent van Gogh's Sunflowers — in sushi, of course — and a display of his amazing decorative maki rolls. Ken's version of Sunflowers was created to celebrate the release of the chef's new book in Japan.

◀ How does Ken's sushi Sunflowers match up with Van Gogh's 1888 original?
